TO LEAVE. v. n.
1. To cease; to desist.
She is my essence, and I leave to be,
If I be not by her fair influence
Foster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept alive. Shakespeare.
And since this business so far fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won. Shakesp. H. IV.
He began at the eldest, and left at the youngest. Genes.

2. To leave off. To desist.
Gritus, hoping that they in the castle would not hold out, left off to batter or undermine it, wherewith he perceived he little prevail'd. Kneller's Hist. of the Turks.
But when you find that vigorous heat abate,
Leave off, and for another summons wait. Roscommon.

3. To leave off. To stop.
Wrongs do not leave off there where they begin,
But still beget new mischiefs in their course. Daniel.
TO LEAVE. v. a. [from levy; lever, French.] To levy; to raise: a corrupt word, made, I believe, by Spenser, for a rhyme.
An army strong the leav'd,
To war on those which him had of his realm bereav'd.
Spenser's Fairy Queen, b. ii.

LE'AVED. adj. [from leaves, of leaf.]
1. Furnished with foliage.
2. Made with leaves or folds.
I will loose the reins of kings, to open before him the two leaved gates. Ista. xlv. 1.

LE'AVEN. n. f. [from levain, French; leaven, Latin.]
1. Ferment mixed with any body to make it light; particularly used of four dough mixed in a mass of bread.
It shall not be baken with leaven. Lev. vi. 17.
All fermented meats and drinks are easildest digested; and those unfermented, by barm or leaven, are hardly digested. Floyer.
2. Any mixture which makes a general change in the mass.
Many of their propoitions favour very strong of the old leaven of innovations. King Charles.

TO LE'AVEN. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To ferment by something mixed.
You must tarry the leav'ning. Shakesp. Troil. and Cressida.
Whoever cateth leavened bread, that soul shall be cut off. Exod. xii. 17.
Breads we have of several grains, with divers kinds of leavenings, and seasonings; so that some do extremely move appetites. Bacon's Atlantia.

2. To taint; to imbue.
That cruel something unpossess, Corrodes and leavens all the rest. Prior.

LE'AYER. n. f. [from leave.] One who deserts or forsakes.
Let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver, and a fugitive. Shakespeare.

LEAVES. n. f. The plural of leaf.
Parts fit for the nourishment of man in plants are, seeds, roots, and fruits; for leaves they give no nourishment at all.
Bacon's Natural History.

LE'AVINGS. n. f. [from leave.] Remnant; relics; offal: it has no singular.
My father has this morning call'd together,
To this poor hall, his little Roman senate,
The leavings of Pharfalia. Addison's Cato.
Then who can think we'll quit the place,
Or stop and light at Cloe's head, Swift.
With scraps and leavings to be fed.

LE'AVY. adj. [from leaf.] Full of leaves; covered with leaves.
Strephon, with leavy twigs of laurel tree,
A garland made on temples for to wear,
For he then chosen was the dignity
Of village lord that Whitontide to bear. Sidney.
Now, near enough: your leavy screens throw down,
And show like those you are. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

TO LECH. v. a. [from lecher, French.] To lick over. Hammer.
Hast thou yet leched the Athenian's eyes
With the love juice. Shakesp. Midsummer Night's Dream.

LE'CHER. n. f. [Derived by Skinner from luxure, old French:
luxuria is used in the middle ages in the same sense.] A whoremaster.
I will now take the lecher; he's at my house; he cannot 'scape me. Shakesp. Merry Wives of Windsor.
You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors. Shakespeare.
The lecher soon transforms his mistress; now
In lo's place appears a lovely cow. Dryden.
The sleepy lecher shuts his little eyes,
About his charming chaps the frothy bubbles rise. Dryden.
She yields her charms
To that fair lecher, the strong god of arms. Pope's Ody.

TO LE'CHER. v. n. [from the noun.] To whore.
Die for adultery? no. The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly does lecher in my sight. Shakesp. King Lear.

LEE

Gut eats all day, and leeches all the night. B. Johnson.

LEC'HEROUS. adj. [from lecher.] Leud; lustful.
The sapphire should grow foul, and lose its beauty, when worn by one that is lecherous; the emerald should fly to pieces, if it touch the skin of any unchaste person. Dryden.

LE'CHEROUSLY. adv. [from lecherous.] Leudly; lustfully.
LE'CHEROUSNESS. n. f. [from lecherous.] Leudness.
LE'CHERY. n. f. [from lecher.] Leudness; lust.

The rest welter with as little shame in open lechery, as swine do in the common mire. Ascham's Schooldmaster.
Against such leudsters, and their lechery,
Those that betray them do no treachery. Shakespeare.

LE'CTION. n. f. [from lectio, Lat.] A reading; a variety in copies.
Every critick has his own hypothesis: if the common text be not favourable to his opinion, a various lection shall be made authentic. Watts's Logic.

LE'CTURE. n. f. [from lecture, French.]
1. A discourse pronounced upon any subject.
Mark him, while Dametas reads his rustick lecture unto him, how to feed his beasts before noon, and where to shade them in the extreme heat. Sidney, b. ii.

Wrangling pedant,
When in musick we have spent an hour,
Your lecture shall have leisure for as much. Shakesp.
When letters from Cesar were given to Ruficus, he refused to open them till the philosopher had done his lectures. Taylor's Holy Living.
Virtue is the solid good, which tutors should not only read lectures and talk of, but the labour and art of education should furnish the mind with, and fasten there. Locke.
Numidia will be blest by Cato's lectures. Addison's Cato.

2. The act or practice of reading; perusal.
In the lecture of holy scripture, their apprehensions are commonly confined unto the literal sense of the text. Browne.

3. A magisterial reprimand.
TO LE'CTURE. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To instruct formally.
2. To instruct insolently and dogmatically.

LE'CTURER. n. f. [from lecture.] An instructor; a teacher by way of lecture; a preacher in a church hired by the parish to assist the rector or vicar.
If any minister refused to admit into his church a lecturer recommended by them, and there was not one orthodox or learned man recommended, he was presently required to attend upon the committee. Clarendon.

LE'CTURESHIP. n. f. [from lecture.] The office of a lecturer.
He got a lectureship in town of sixty pounds a year, where he preached constantly in person. Swift.

LED. part. pret. of lead.
Then shall they know that I am the Lord your God, which caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen. Ezek. xxxix. 28.
The leaders of this people caused them to err, and they that are led of them are destroyed. Ista. ix. 16.
As in vegetables and animals, so in most other bodies, not propagated by seed, it is the colour we most fix on, and are most led by. Locke.

LEDGE. n. f. [from leggen, Dutch, to lie.]
1. A row; layer; stratum.
The lowest ledge or row should be merely of stone, closely laid, without mortar: a general caution for all parts in building contiguous to board. Watson's Architecture.

2. A ridge rising above the rest.
The four parallel sticks rising above five inches higher than the handkerchief, served as ledges on each side. Gulliver.

3. Any prominence, or rising part.
Beneath a ledge of rocks his fleet he hides,
The bending brow above, a safe retreat provides. Dryden.

LEDHORSE. n. f. [from led and horse.] A sumpter horse.
LEE. n. f. [from lie, French.]
1. Dregs; sediment; refuse.
My cloaths, my sex, exchange'd for thee, Prior.
I'll mingle with the people's wretched lee.
2. [Sea term; supposed by Skinner from leau, French.] It is generally that side which is opposite to the wind, as the lee shore is that the wind blows on. To be under the lee of the shore, is to be close under the weather shore. A leeward ship is one that is not fast by a wind, to make her way so good as she might. To lay a ship by the lee, is to bring her so that all her sails may lie against the masts and throw'd flat, and the wind to come right on her broadside, so that she will make little or no way.
If we, being form-beaten in the bay of Biscay, had had a port under our lee, that we might have kept our transporting ships with our men of war, we had taken the Indian fleet, and the Azores. Raleigh's Apology.
The Hollanders were wont to ride before Dunkirk with the wind at north west, making a lee shore in all weathers. Raleigh's Essay.
Unprovided of tackling and victuallings, they are forced to sea by a storm; yet better do so than venture splitting and sinking on a lee shore. King Charles.

LEE

Him, haply slumbering on the Norway foam;
The pilot of some small night-founder'd skiff,
Deeming some island, oft, as seamen tell,
With fix'd anchor in his scaly rind,
Moors by his side under the lee, while night
Invests the sea. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. i.

Batter'd by his lee they lay,
The passing winds through their torn canvass play. Dryden.

LEECH. n. f. [from leech, Saxon.]
1. A physician; a professor of the art of healing: whence we still use cowleech.
A leech, the which had great insight
In that disease of griev'd conscience,
And well could cure the same; his name was patience. Spenser's Fairy Queen, b. i.

Her words prevail'd, and then the learned leech
His cunning hand 'gan to his wounds to lay,
And all things else the which his art did teach. Fa. Qu.

Physick is their bane.
The learned leeches in despair depart,
And shake their heads, depending of their art. Dryden.
Wife leeches will not vain receipts obtrude:
Deaf to complaints they wait upon the ill,
Till some safe crisis. Dryden.
The hoary wrinkled leech has watch'd and toil'd,
Tried every health restoring herb and gum,
And wearied out his painful skill in vain. Rowe's J. Shore.

A skilful leech,
They say, had wrought this blest deed;
This leech Arbuthnot was yeapt. Gay's Pastorals.

2. A kind of small water serpent, which fastens on animals, and sucks the blood: it is used to draw blood where the lancet is less safe, whence perhaps the name.
I drew blood by leeches behind his ear. Wise's Surge.
Sticking like leeches, till they burst with blood,
Without remorse insatiably. Roscommon.

TO LEECH. v. a. [from the noun.] To treat with medica-ments.
LEECHCRAFT. n. f. [from leech and craft.] The art of healing:
We study speech; but others we persuade:
We leechcraft learn; but others cure with it. Davies.

LEEF. adj. [from lieve, Dutch.] Kind; fond.
Whilome all these were low and leef;
And lov'd their flocks to feed;
They never strove to be the chief,
And simple was their weed. Spenser's Pastorals.

LEEK. n. f. [from leac, Saxon; hook, Dutch; leek, Erse.]
Its flower consists of six pedals, and is shaped, as it were, like a bell; in the center arises the point, which afterward becomes a roundish fruit, divided into three cells, which contain roundish seeds: to these notes may be added, the flamins are generally broad and flat, ending in three capilla-ments, of which the middle one is furnished with a chive;
the flowers are also gathered into almost globular bunches:
the roots are long, cylindrical, and coated, the coats ending in plain leaves. Miller.

Know'st thou Flæliën? — Yes.
— Tell him I'll knock his leek about his pate;
Upon St. David's day. Shakespeare's Henry V.
Leek to the Welsh, to Dutchmen butter's dear. Gay.
We use acid plants inwardly and outwardly in gangrenes;
in the scurvy, water-creases, horse-radish, garlic, or leek potage. Floyer on Humours.

LEER. n. f. [from leere, Saxon.]
1. An oblique view.
I spy entertainment in her; she gives the leer of invitation.
Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.
Aside the devil turn'd
For envy, yet with jealous leer malign Ey'd them askance. Milton's Par. Lost, b. iv.

2. A laboured cast of countenance.
Damn with faint praise, concede with civil leer. Pope.
I place a statesman full before my sight;
A bloated monster in all his gear,
With shameless visage, and perfidious leer. Swift.

TO LEER. v. n. [from the noun.]
1. To look obliquely; to look archly.
I will leer upon him as he comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me. Shakesp. Henry IV.
I wonder whether you taste the pleasure of independency, or whether you do not sometimes leer upon the court. Swift.

2. To look with a forced countenance.
Bertran has been taught the arts of courts,
To gild a face with smiles, and leer a man to ruin. Dryd.

LEES. n. f. [from lie, French.] Dregs; sediment: it has seldom a singular.
This proceeded by reason of the old humour of those countries, where the memory of King Richard was so strong, that it lay like lees in the bottom of mens hearts; and if the vessel was but stirred, it would come up: Bacon's Henry VII.
If they love lees, and leave the luscious wine,
Envy them not their palates with the wine. B. Johnson.

LEG

Those lees that trouble it refine
The agitated soul of generous wine. Dryden.

TO LEESE. v. a. [from lefen, Dutch.] To lose: an old word.
Then fell to thy profit both butter and cheese, Tusser.
Who bueth it sooner the more he shall leese.
No cause, nor client fat, will Chev'ril leese,
But as they come on both sides he takes fees;
And pleaseth both: for while he melts his grease
For this, that wins for whom he holds his peace. B. Johnson.
How in the port our fleet dear time did leese,
Withering like prisoners, which lie but for fees. Donne.

LEET. n. f.
Leet, or leta, is otherwise called a law-day. The word seemeth to have grown from the Saxon lece, which was a court of jurisdiction above the wapentake or hundred, comprehending three or four of them, otherwise called thirfling, and contained the third part of a province or shire:
these jurisdictions, one and other, be now abolished, and swallowed up in the county court. Cowell.

Who has a breast so pure,
But some uncleanly apprehensions Keep leets and law-days, and in sessions sit With meditations lawful. Shakespeare's Othello.

You would present her at the leet,
Because she bought stone jugs, and no seal'd quarts. Shak.

LE'WARD. adj. [from lece and ward, Saxon.]
1. Towards the wind. See LEE.
The classics were called long ships, the onerarie round, because of their figure approaching towards circular: this figure, though proper for the stowage of goods, was not the fittest for sailing; because of the great quantity of leeward way, except when they failed full before the wind. Arbuth.

Let no statesman dare,
A kingdom to a ship compare;
Left he should call our commonweal
A vessel with a double keel;
Which just like ours, new rigg'd and man'd,
And got about a league from land,
By change of wind to leeward side,
The pilot knew not how to guide. Swift.

Alas, poor lady! desolate and left;
I weep myself to think upon thy words. Shakespeare.
Had such a river as this been left to itself, to have found its way out from among the Alps, whatever windings it had made, it must have formed several little seas. Addison.
Were I left to myself, I would rather aim at instructing than diverting; but if we will be useful to the world, we must take it as we find it. Addison's Spectator, N. 179.

LE'FT. adj. [from lufit, Dutch; levis, Latin.] Sinistrous; not right.
That there is also in men a natural prepotency in the right, we cannot with constancy affirm, if we make observation in children, who permitted the freedom of both hands, do ofttimes confine it unto the left, and are not without great difficulty restrained from it. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. iv.

The right to Pluto's golden palace guides,
The left to that unhappy region tends,
Which to the depth of Tartarus descends. Dryden's Æn.

The gods of greater nations dwell around,
And, on the right and left, the palace bound;
The commons where they can. Dryden.

A raven from a wither'd oak,
Left of their lodging was oblig'd to croak;
That omen lik'd him not. Dryden.

The left foot naked when they march to fight,
But in a bull's raw hide they sheathe the right. Dryden.

The man who struggles in the fight,
Fatigues left arm as well as right. Prior.

LEFT-HANDED. adj. [from left and hand.] Using the left-hand rather than right.
The limbs are used most on the right-side, whereby custom helpeth; for we see, that some are left-handed, which are such as have used the left-hand most. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
For the seat of the heart and liver on one side, whereby men become left-handed, it happeneth too rarely to countenance an effect so common: for the seat of the liver on the left-side is very monstrous. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

LEFT-HANDEDNESS. n. f. [from left-handed.] Habitual use of
Although a squint left-handedness
B' ungracious; yet we cannot want that hand. Donne.

LEG. n. f. [from leg, Danish; legger, Mandick.]
1. The limb by which we walk; particularly that part between the knee and the foot.
They haste; and what their tardy feet deny'd,
The trusty staff, their better leg, supply'd. Dryden.
Purging comfits, and ants eggs,
Had almost brought him off his legs. Handibras.
Such intrigues people cannot meet with, who have nothing but leg to carry them. Addison's Guardian.

2. An
